It's basically doomsday but you can't go breaking all the rules just yet a lot of people, myself included are talking increasingly about outside sites. this is a very fine line to walk. if you start directing people to the sites, it's going to become a problem. i dont want to see any of yall getting banned when we have so little time left

Becky mentioned the possibility of creating an out-of-game Newsfeed. and it's just that right now, a possibility. there's a lot of channels that have to be run and a whole bunch of others things to be done before that could be a reality. she knows we want it, but it may not happen for a long time, if at all. a lot of you are hanging your hats on a hook that you're not even sure is there. it's fine to hope, but be realistic.

please, Be Nice To The Mods. They're just trying to do their jobs and i really doubt they get paid enough to handle 50+ salty children i know it's a frustrating time but if you find yourself launching into a sixteen paragraph diatribe, take a moment to breathe. odds are someone may have already voiced your frustration, and your energy will be better spent elsewhere save your character forms! It's good practice to have some kind of system already in place, but make sure you get everything you can!
